

Henan University Selects SirsiDynix Symphony

Historic Henan University "keeping abreast of the times" with progressive SirsiDynix academic solutions

March 23, 2016, LEHI, UT—SirsiDynix is honored to welcome Henan University to the family of SirsiDynix customers. As part of the five-year agreement, Henan University will implement Symphony, a next generation LSP, as well as Enterprise/Portfolio, and MobileCirc to serve the Library's over 60,000 students and staff members. The system will support the University consortium structure and facilitate future expansion and regional cooperation.

Founded in 1912, Henan University is one of the oldest universities in China. Henan University offers its students a rich history but also a focus on the future, with goals to develop into a top national university and a comprehensive, research-oriented international university. Moving forward with these goals, Henan University Library selected SirsiDynix technology as the best solution to serve its library, students, and staff. As part of the selection process, the Henan Library undertook extensive investigation and noted SirsiDynix's success in implementing other Consortia systems in China, both in academic and public libraries. Henan Library was also impressed by the open architecture of the SirsiDynix's LSP, which will allow the Library to add new service facilities through Web Services.

"We are excited by the opportunity to support Henan University as they accomplish their goals," said Bill Davison, SirsiDynix CEO. "The flexible architecture behind Symphony is an excellent resource that can support the breadth of Henan Library's goals and expand with Henan University as they grow."
