April 24, 2023, LEHI, UT—SirsiDynix, a leading provider of library technology solutions, announced today that it is the recipient of national workplace awards in two categories: innovation and work life flexibility.

Recognized as a top workplace by the Salt Lake Tribune for 10 consecutive years, SirsiDynix is thrilled to see this year's distinctions so closely align with the company's own values of employee fulfillment, creative ingenuity, and work-life balance.

The awards, announced annually, are based on an anonymous all-staff survey designed to measure employee satisfaction on a range of topics, including culture, leadership, benefits, and opportunities for employee engagement. As in previous years, SirsiDynix employees were eager to respond, with 85% of employees opting to participate.

As detailed on the company's website, SirsiDynix offers a comprehensive benefits package consisting of flexible PTO, paid family-related leave, access to a company-matched 401k, and more. With an average employee tenure of 13 years, SirsiDynix also underscores the power of mission-driven work, supporting employees in making meaningful contributions to libraries—and communities—across the globe.

"We are honored to receive these awards and immensely grateful for the candid feedback of our employees," says SirsiDynix CEO Bill Davison.

"Creating a culture of collaboration and compassion—and ensuring employees feel both valued and inspired—is of the utmost importance to us," Davison continues. "It is a privilege to work with this incredible group of people, and together, we will continue to strive to not only emphasize the power of libraries but expand their impact."
